The American Enterprise Institute will certainly do everything within its power to advance a Republican agenda. If its agenda is too progressive they will attempt to repeal the Affordable Care Act, the "Affordable Care Act" (ACA) and possibly other major pieces of legislation (like the recently proposed anti-LGBTQ Religious Freedom Restoration Act that is currently in the works) to maintain the status quo. Or if the think tank gets too far "on the left" it will try to impose its own extreme views on America and the world.. But the think tanks, which are currently under threat from Donald J. Trump as well as from the political establishment in Washington, D.C., should not be demonized. They are vital to economic and geopolitical security and in time they must become less so. It is too late. The Republican Party could well do better to get out of Washington and back into the public sphere – at home to make real conservative ideas that actually help the country instead of pushing them back at home..
